A Brief History

Of all methods of funerary portraits, the most common is an imprint of a photograph baked on porcelain. First originating in France in 1855, photographic portraits became common in North American cemeteries by the 1890s. Guaranteed not to fade, our photoceramics can be finished in color, black and white or antique sepia. Any finish will result in a memorial portrait of the highest quality. Remembering a loved one by having their portrait placed on the memorial allows them to live on in the hearts and minds of future generations.
